Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Abandoned by the man she loved more than life itself . . . Cheated out of true love, Fanny Morgan spent years on the frontier hankering after a man she believes walked away from her. When he rides into Water Springs one cool, early spring day, she turns her back on him. She is simply unwilling to face the man again, and consequently her fears. Mac Conners loves Fanny from afar. He needs to talk to her, but how can he when she s always waving a gun in his direction? A wedding in the small town brings back the heartache of losing her. Now, more than ever, he needs Fanny to hear his words. Don t women who use a shotgun to scare off a man need a bit of luvin ? However, reuniting with a woman aiming a gun is just about impossible. Or is it? Will Fanny ever forgive the man she once loved? Excerpt: He wasn t lying. Fanny wore a sky blue gown with ruffles at the hem and a pair of soft leather shoes. Guilt ate away at his insides. When they had been younger, he d promised her a life filled with every luxury of which she could conceive, yet none of that had come to pass. If only he hadn t left her, if only he d taken her along despite the hardships in his life, wouldn t the preceding years have turned out differently? They would have had a passel of children, and their grandkids would surround them in this moment. Now, there was nothing but animosity between them, and he had little idea why she didn t at...
