Not illustrated. 1852 Excerpt: .he writes in his Journal, the English service lasted from five to half-past six. The Italian, with a few Vaudois began at nine. Next came service for the English, including the sermon with the holy communion, continued from half-past ten till about half-past twelve. The French service began at one. At two I catechised the children. About three began the English service. After this was ended I joined with as many as my largest room could hold, in reading, prayer, and singing praise. And about six the service of the Germans began, at which I was glad to be present, not as a teacher, but as a learner. This is no artist s sketch of himself, hung up in his studio as a specimen of his skill, or poet s portrait prefixed to doggrel dithyrambs, with eye in a fine frenzy rolling, to gratify personal vanity, or lure love-sick misses; but the grave unvarnished report of a grave earnest man, who knew there was little to commend in it, for in doing his utmost he only did what was his duty to do. Tet was he the prince of missionaries, however humble his self-estimate might be, the prime apostle of Christendom since Luther; his pre-eminent example too likely to be lost sight of in this missionary age, when the church, in the bustle of its present activities, has little time to cherish recollections of its past worthies, or to speculate with clearness on the shapes...
