If any devastations be committed in the territory of the god, if any shall be privy to such offence, or entertain any design against the temple, I will use my hands, my feet, my whole force, to bring the offending party to condign punishment An awful imprecation was What remains from ancient authors upon the subject has been largely collected by Dean Prideaux in his treatise on the Oxford Marbles, and Dr. Leland, in the preliminary Discourse to his History of Philip king of Macedonia, has added what has been imagined by modern writers. In the sequel of this history occasion will occur to notice the connection of the Amphictyonic council with the political interests of the country, as they arise; whence illustration, still imperfect, yet perhaps the best to be obtained, may result. c Ha P. Was subjoined: If any shall violate any part of----- this solemn engagement, whether city, private person, or nation, may such violators be obnoxious to the vengeance of Apollo, Diana, Latona, and Minerva the Provident. May their land never produce its fruit; May their women never bring forth children of the same nature with the parents, but offspring unnatural and monstrous: May they be forever defeated in war, in judicial controversies, and in all civil transactions; and may their families, and their whole race, be utterly destroyed: May they never offer an acceptable sacrifice...
