For as much as man is naturally prone To evil from his youth, as Scripture doth recite, It is necessary that he be speedily withdrawn From concupiscence of sin, his natural appetite: [write, - An order to bring up youth Ecclesiasticus doth An untamed horse will be hard, saith he, And a wanton child wilful will be. [excuse, Give him no liberty in youth, nor his folly Bow down his neck, and keep him in good awe, Lest he be stubborn: no labour refuse [law, To train him to wisdom and teach him God s For youth is frail and easy to draw By grace to goodness, by nature to ill: That nature hath ingrafted, is hard to kill. Nevertheless, in youth men may be best Trained to virtue by godly mean; Vice may be so mortified and so suppress, That it shall not break furth, yet the root will...
